

N522
6a

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely Hebrew, on a narrow, vertical strip of parchment. The text is densely packed and appears to be a fragment of a larger document. The script is highly stylized and difficult to decipher. The strip is irregularly shaped with frayed edges, suggesting it was part of a larger scroll or book. The text is oriented vertically, reading from top to bottom. At the bottom of the strip, there is a small, distinct number '6'. The background of the page is light and textured, with a dark vertical strip on the right side.
